ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The present invention provides apparatus and methods to perform thermal management in a computing environment. Thermal attributes are associated with operations and/or processing components. The components have thermal thresholds that should not be exceeded. In a preferred embodiment, an operation can be transferred from one component to another component if the thermal threshold is exceeded during execution by the first component.

483694_1.DOC